Abstract:

IEEE-USA Senior Legislative Representing for Grassroots Activities, Russell Harrison, will be joining us to discuss the 2010 election, what it means to engineers, and what we can do about it. Many of the great debates in Washington, DC focus on issues of unique concern to engineers: energy policy, federal R&D spending, high-skill immigration, intellectual property reform. The election on November second will have a profound impact on how these debates proceed, with huge consequences for engineers. Join one of IEEE's top lobbyists for an open discussion about how Congress will be affecting your career and what we, as engineers, can do about it.
